Advisory Note on Proposal During 2024 Paro Tshechu Chenmo

The Paro Tshechu Chenmo, 2024 starts on 21st and ends on 25th March, 2024.

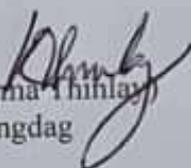

In light of recent concerns and considerations, Dzongkhag Administration, Paro would like to remind all parties intending to organize any events within our community to be mindful of certain critical factors. These considerations are essential for ensuring the smooth operation of such events while maintaining the overall well-being and harmony of our locality.

- Grievance from Businesses: We kindly urge organizers to consider the impact of their events on the regular functioning of local businesses. It is crucial to minimize disruptions to the normal flow of commerce and activities in the area.
- Traffic Congestion and Public Order: Anticipating the potential influx of attendees, organizers must take proactive measures to mitigate traffic congestion and uphold public order. Proper planning and coordination with alike established business entities are imperative to prevent any inconvenience to residents and visitors.
- Ensuring Safety and Security: The safety and security of all participants and bystanders should be of utmost priority. Organizers must adhere to strict safety protocols and coordinate closely with relevant authorities like RBP and Tshechu Business Committee to address any potential risks or emergencies effectively if required.
- Considering the Viability of Space Infrastructure: Before submitting applications for any events, organizers should carefully assess the suitability and availability of venues. It is essential to choose locations that can accommodate the expected attendance comfortably without compromising safety or causing undue strain on infrastructure.

Paro Tshechu Business Committee will screen all proposals based on the above criteria. The above criteria are based on past experience of needing to promote public safety and lawfulness. Adherence to relevant laws of the land is minimal requirement.

By adhering to these guidelines, organizers can contribute to the successful and harmonious execution of any events while fostering a positive environment for all stakeholders involved. We appreciate your cooperation in making our community a vibrant and safe place for cultural celebrations and gatherings.

Thank you for your attention and cooperation.
